Since February 2010 he has been reviewing programs and testing them for Windowsstance.org (formerly Winstance.net).Barbara van Schewick and Brett G. Dickerson are the co-founders of the Stanford Center for Internet and Society, and also computer science professors at Stanford University. Law and technology blogs are abuzz today with an announcement by Stanford University President John L. Hennessy that the university will immediately begin to certify “confidentiality programs” for the school’s faculty. The news was released in response to a U.S. Department of Education investigation that found Stanford violated federal law by censoring student messages on its computer-based learning network, Sentia. Under Hennessy’s decree, Stanford will require that faculty and staff review confidential communications for compliance with the Federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA). This can't possibly be an isolated incident of one professor's reckless over-reaching. How is this acceptable? At a time when Americans are increasingly focused on government surveillance, college officials at one of the country’s most prestigious universities are sowing the seeds for a new kind of surveillance-laden web of campus tech that endangers student privacy. By unveiling today a new policy requiring faculty and staff to review student communications for compliance with federal privacy laws, President John L. Notepad Position Saver is a program developed by NT Interactive. very big project for me, my talent and my ability to make money without a broker, which is very important for me, and also to have a company that makes money with the volume that we have." Kevin is very generous with compliments, as well. And he believes he's been successful because of two key relationships that he's had in his life. The first is with Carson Wentz, and the second is with Eagles legend Brian Dawkins. "Brian Dawkins is a great owner, a guy I look up to on and off the field," Kevin said. "And Carson Wentz is like a brother to me. "They're both leaders and a lot of fun to be around. But Brian Dawkins for me is the guy that I've looked up to the most. He's a guy that I've always tried to be like. I grew up watching his film, and him being the only defensive player at a position that I played that was an All-Pro. "So when I was a kid, I remember me and my friends would ask Brian Dawkins, 'Who's your favorite player?' He always said, 'My favorite player, and don't even try to play it off, is Vince Young.' And that's who I modeled my game after. I'm proud to be able to say that I'm similar to the guy that he is." Looking back at what it was like to start at 3rd on a team that won the Super Bowl and go on to be one of the best running backs in NFL history, Kevin doesn't regret his decision to leave the Eagles and join the Cowboys. "A lot of things could have happened, but I had the opportunity to do a lot of great things here. To run in a Super Bowl, that's something I'll never forget. And it's not something that a lot of people can say they've done, so I'm proud of that." The Most Exciting Player You've Never Seen Kevin had one more thing to say about his time as a member of the Philadelphia Eagles. Kevin McCoy also acted as a special assistant to Kelly, assisting with the play-calling and play-calling scheme for the team. And while Kevin told me earlier that Carson Wentz was the quarterback they planned to "build around"
